B.Sc.

Manager, Consulting Indigenous Services

Profile

Adena Vanderjagt, B.Sc., is a member of MNP's Consulting team, specializing in the Duty to Consult, Environmental Assessment review and Indigenous rights studies (also known as traditional land use studies). Adena has over 12 years' experience in this field and has worked extensively with Métis governments, First Nations and industry proponents.

Adena has worked on a variety of Indigenous rights studies, with expertise in Métis project-specific studies; and has worked on a number of successful regulatory interventions and innovative assessment reports.

Adena's most recent projects include environmental assessment review and execution of rights-specific assessments which focus on the collection of Indigenous specific baseline information and the identification of potential effects to Indigenous rights.

Adena is known for her detailed orientation, and ability to navigate complex ideas and succinctly translate those ideas into products for her clients.

Service Line

Adena has extensive knowledge and experience in the areas of third-party environmental assessment review for both federal and provincial processes, execution of Indigenous specific studies such as traditional land use studies and implementing successful consultation processes. She also helps organizations understand three pillars of the Duty to Consult including treaty and Indigenous rights, environmental assessment methodology and relevant case law/regulatory environments.
